What do download managers do?

Answer:

Download managers are useful for download files from the web. These managers break a download into smaller more manageable segments helping to ensure the accuracy of data transfer. Download managers can also increase the overall speed of a download by downloading multiple parts at once through an ISP or network that limits the speed of an individual connection. It is suggested to never download a file or segment that is larger than 255mb without breaking it down into smaller pieces. A download manager will accomplish this for you.
